Part II Reading Comprehension

Directions: read these passages and then select the best choice(a, b, c or d) for each question following the passages.

Passage 1

The human body is admirably engineered to perform a wide variety of functions.

Unfortunately, walking upright is not one of them. Our ancestors, from whom we inherit our basic body structure, moved about by swinging through the trees; if they had to get about on the ground at all, they did so on all fours. They had long powerful shoulders and arms, and they used their thighs, legs and feet for reaching, holding, gripping but rarely for standing on.

When our ancestors finally took to the ground, they walked at first rather like gorillas or chimpanzees, bent forward at the hip joints with the weight of the upper body supported by their powerful arms and knuckles. The tilt of the pelvis of the most recent human ancestor, who was still more ape than man, indicates he walked on flat feet tilting forward from the hip joints and moved on all fours when real speed was required. Therefore, his instance for moving on the ground was the first adaptation of the original structural body design for tree swinging.

The first human ancestor considered true man is called Homo Erectus, specially because the most significant adaptation he made was to walk entirely upright. Erect posture is thus a second adaptation of human locomotion. It required that the entire weight of the upper body be supported by the spinal column and especially by the lower back, which was originally a fragile pivot as compared to the powerful shoulders, arms, and legs. The legacy of this adoption is strain on some muscles, under use of others, and – you guessed it – back trouble. Nature evidently never intended the back to support column.

41. Based on the first paragraph, our ancestors lived.....
- a. on the ground b. on the trees c. in the caves d. under the ground
42. The second paragraph concentrates on the.....adaptation of human locomotion.
- a. real b. very natural c. first d. most important

Passage 2

Geyser is a spring that throws up hot water with explosive force from time to time. Often the water shoots up from a geyser in great columns, cloudy with steam. Geysers attract many tourists.

“ Old Faithful” in Yellowstone National Park is probably the world’s most famous geyser. On average, it erupts for about 4 minutes once in every 65 minutes. The eruptions are usually 120 to 150 feet high. People have observed “Old Faithful” for over 80 years, and this geyser has not missed an eruption.

Most other geysers erupt at irregular intervals, and no one knows when they will go off. Some geysers erupt several times in an hour. Others do not go off for hours, days, weeks, or even months. In some, the water only bubbles above the ground. In others, it soars in fountains over 100 feet high.

46. Each eruption of the Old Faithful lasts.....
- a. about 65 minutes b. almost 4 minutes c. nearly an hour d. for 80 years
47. The definition of geyser is given in the.....sentence of the passage.
- a. first b. second c. third d. fourth
48. Eruptions of the Old Faithful usually occur.....
- a. every other day b. for hours c. regularly d. occasionally
